🔁 My Reset Plan: Reading · ANSWER KEY

SEL · Unit 3 · Level 3 (closer to the class work) · goes with SEL Level 2 slides: My Reset Plan

Name: _____

⏱️ 5-minute review

- Name three calm-down tools from your toolkit.
- Which tool is quiet enough to use in class?
- Say (don't write) your energy, 1 to 5.

Making a Reset Plan

Everyone gets upset sometimes. A reset plan is a short plan you make ahead of time, while you are calm, so you know what to do when a hard moment comes.

A reset plan has five parts. A trigger is what sets you off, like a loud room or a hard test. A body clue is how your body warns you, like a hot face, fast heart or tight fists. Plan A is the first tool you try. Plan B is your backup tool. Last, you name a trusted adult and a place you can go.

The plan works in steps: notice the trigger, check your body, use Plan A, then ask yourself, “Did it help?” If you feel better, great. If you feel the same or worse, switch to Plan B. If you are still not calm, go to your trusted adult. Asking for help is part of the plan, not a failure.

Your toolkit so far: box breathing, squeeze and release, cold water, 5-4-3-2-1 grounding, cool thoughts, and a reset pass or asking for a break.

Check your reading

1. Why do we make a reset plan while we are calm?
Because it is hard to think clearly when upset; the plan is ready ahead of time.
2. What do you do if Plan A does not help?
Switch to Plan B; if still not calm, go to a trusted adult.