Building a Toolkit Binder

A toolkit binder holds one page for each calm-down tool. Each page has the tool's name, a picture, three quick steps, when you use it and where you can use it.

Example: Cold water. Steps: 1) ask for a pass, 2) go to the sink, 3) splash or hold cold water for 30 seconds. Use it when my face feels hot and I want to yell. Where: school and home.

You rate each tool from one to three stars. The rating is about you. A tool that is three stars for one person can be one star for someone else, and that is okay. Your binder is your own guide.

Tools can be quiet (box breathing, squeeze and release), thinking tools (cool thoughts, self-talk) or step-away tools (cold water, 5-4-3-2-1, reset pass).

Check your reading

1. What goes on a toolkit page?
Name, picture, 3 steps, when I use it, where I can use it, my rating.

2. Why can two people rate the same tool differently?
The rating is personal; tools work differently for different people.
