Reading Faces

Social awareness means noticing how other people feel. People don't always say their feelings, so we look for clues, like a detective.

Faces give three main clues: the eyes, the eyebrows and the mouth. Wide eyes, raised eyebrows and an open mouth can mean surprised or scared. Eyebrows pulled down with a tight mouth can mean mad. Eyes looking down with the mouth turned down can mean sad.

Say what you see and why: “I think she feels surprised because her eyes are wide.” That is using evidence.

A good detective checks more than one clue before deciding.
