Voice and Place Clues

Voices give clues too. A loud voice can mean mad or excited. A shaky voice can mean nervous or scared. A quiet or soft voice can mean sad or shy. A fast voice can mean excited or worried.

Place clues help as well. Ask: What just happened? Did they lose a game or get a good grade? Where are they? A test day, lunch, a job site or the bus can change how people feel.

Put all the clues together: face, body, voice and place. Example: Fast voice, bouncing feet, and they just got a good grade, so they are probably excited.

Then choose a kind response, like giving space, saying congratulations or asking if they are okay.
