Winning the Vote

In 1848 Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott organized the first women's rights convention at Seneca Falls, New York. Their Declaration of Sentiments, modeled on the Declaration of Independence, declared that “all men and women are created equal” and demanded suffrage, the right to vote. Many people, including some supporters, thought the demand was too radical.

Susan B. Anthony became the movement's best-known leader. In 1872 she voted in the presidential election in Rochester and was arrested. At her trial the judge fined her $100; she replied that she would “never pay a dollar of your unjust penalty,” and she never did. Western territories such as Wyoming (1869) and Washington (1910) gave women the vote before most eastern states.

By the 1910s the movement split over strategy. The National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA), led by Carrie Chapman Catt, worked patiently state by state. Alice Paul and Lucy Burns formed the National Woman's Party (NWP), which demanded a federal amendment and used bold public protest. On March 3, 1913, the day before Woodrow Wilson's inauguration, Paul organized a parade of more than 5,000 marchers led by Inez Milholland on a white horse. Hostile crowds attacked the marchers. Black suffragists were told to march at the back; Ida B. Wells refused.

In 1917 the NWP's “Silent Sentinels” picketed the White House daily. While the US fought a war “to make the world safe for democracy,” one banner called the president “Kaiser Wilson.” Police arrested the picketers for “obstructing traffic.” At the Occoquan Workhouse they were beaten, and Alice Paul's hunger strike led to force-feeding. Newspaper stories about this treatment won the movement public sympathy.

Women's war work and the pressure of both organizations finally moved Wilson to support suffrage in 1918. Congress passed the 19th Amendment in 1919. On August 18, 1920, Tennessee became the 36th state to ratify when 24-year-old legislator Harry Burn changed his vote after his mother wrote, “Be a good boy” and vote yes. Still, poll taxes, literacy tests and citizenship rules kept many Black, Native American and Asian American women from voting for decades.

Name: _____

Inez Milholland leads the 1913 suffrage parade

Winning the Vote

For most of U.S. history, women could not vote. Many people believed women belonged at home, not in politics.

In 1848, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott led a meeting at Seneca Falls, New York. They wrote that “all men and women are created equal.”

Susan B. Anthony spent more than 50 years organizing. In 1872 she cast a ballot in Rochester, New York, was arrested and fined $100, and never paid. She died in 1906, fourteen years before the amendment named for her passed.

Western territories and states such as Wyoming (1869) and Utah gave women the vote first. Carrie Chapman Catt's “Winning Plan” combined state campaigns with pressure on Congress for a federal amendment.

Alice Paul used bolder ways: a big parade in 1913 and the Silent Sentinels at the White House. Some women were jailed and went on hunger strike.

World War I changed minds. Women filled factory, farm and nursing jobs, and suffragists asked how the U.S. could fight for democracy abroad while denying it to women at home. President Wilson endorsed the amendment in 1918.

Congress passed the 19th Amendment in 1919, and Tennessee became the 36th state to ratify it in August 1920. Still, many Black, Native American and Asian American women faced other barriers to voting for decades.

🗳️ Women's Suffrage: Reading · ANSWER KEY

US History · Unit 8 · Level 3 (closer to the class work) · our own reading

Name: _____

Inez Milholland leads the 1913 suffrage parade

Winning the Vote

For most of U.S. history, women could not vote. Many people believed women belonged at home, not in politics.

In 1848, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott led a meeting at Seneca Falls, New York. They wrote that “all men and women are created equal.”

Susan B. Anthony spent more than 50 years organizing. In 1872 she cast a ballot in Rochester, New York, was arrested and fined $100, and never paid. She died in 1906, fourteen years before the amendment named for her passed.

Western territories and states such as Wyoming (1869) and Utah gave women the vote first. Carrie Chapman Catt's “Winning Plan” combined state campaigns with pressure on Congress for a federal amendment.

Alice Paul used bolder ways: a big parade in 1913 and the Silent Sentinels at the White House. Some women were jailed and went on hunger strike.

World War I changed minds. Women filled factory, farm and nursing jobs, and suffragists asked how the U.S. could fight for democracy abroad while denying it to women at home. President Wilson endorsed the amendment in 1918.

Congress passed the 19th Amendment in 1919, and Tennessee became the 36th state to ratify it in August 1920. Still, many Black, Native American and Asian American women faced other barriers to voting for decades.

Check your reading

1. How did the strategies of Catt and Paul work together to win the vote?
Catt's state campaigns and lobbying built support; Paul's protests created pressure and publicity on Wilson and Congress.

2. Explain the argument suffragists made about democracy during WWI.
The U.S. claimed to fight for democracy abroad but denied women a vote at home.

3. Why does the reading say the fight was not over in 1920?
Women of color faced Jim Crow laws, citizenship rules and other barriers.
