💗 Sensitive topic note

The suffrage story includes jail, beatings at the 1913 parade and force-feeding. We describe these plainly with no images. Name that the movement often excluded Black women, and that many Black and Native women could not vote for decades after 1920.

Winning the Vote

For most of U.S. history, women could not vote. Many people believed women belonged at home, not in politics.

In 1848, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott led a meeting at Seneca Falls, New York. They wrote that “all men and women are created equal.”

Susan B. Anthony traveled the country giving speeches. In 1872 she voted and was arrested and fined. She refused to pay.

Some western states, like Wyoming, let women vote early. Others did not. Carrie Chapman Catt led NAWSA in a plan to win state by state and in Congress.

Alice Paul used bolder ways: a big parade in 1913 and the Silent Sentinels at the White House. Some women were jailed and went on hunger strike.

During World War I, women worked in factories and as nurses. It was hard to say women could not vote while they helped win the war.

In 1920 the 19th Amendment was ratified. Millions of women voted for the first time that November.
