Quick Review

🎷 The 1920s “roared” with cars, radios and buying on credit.

🚫 Prohibition (1920–1933) led to organized crime.

🤔 Quick think: what happens if people buy things they can't pay for?

Words to Know

Words to Know

Stock market crash

On Black Tuesday (Oct. 29, 1929) stock prices fell fast and many people lost their money.

Depression

A long time when businesses close and many people lose jobs. The Great Depression lasted about 10 years.

Bread line

A line where hungry people waited for free bread or soup.

Hooverville

A camp of shacks built by homeless people, named after President Hoover.

Learn

Hard Times

By 1932–33 about 1 in 4 workers had no job.

Homeless people built shack towns called Hoovervilles (Seattle had a big one).

Farmers dumped milk and let crops rot because prices were too low to pay for shipping.

Learn

President Hoover

Hoover ran food relief in Europe during WWI.

He believed the government should not give direct help; charities and business should.

Many Americans blamed him for the Depression.

🃏 Check 2 of 3

What did Hoover believe?

Hold up 1, 2, or 3:

1️⃣ Government should hire everyone

2️⃣ Banks should close forever

3️⃣ Government should not give direct help to people

✅ Answer · Card 2 of 3

Government should not give direct help to people

Rugged individualism.

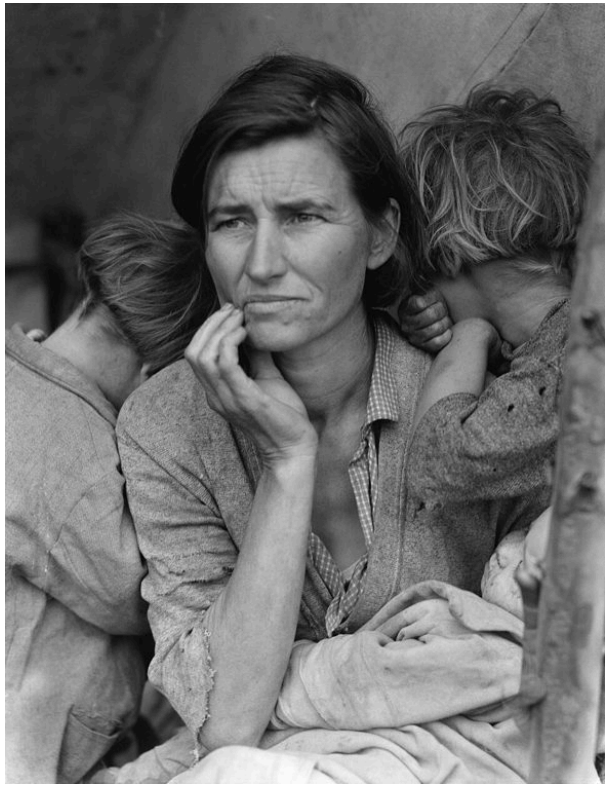

Learn

The Dust Bowl

Drought and over-plowing turned the Great Plains to dust (1930s).

Black blizzards buried farms; families (“Okies”) moved to California.

Dorothea Lange's “Migrant Mother” photo (1936) showed their struggle.

Learn

Riding the Rails

Hundreds of thousands, many of them teens, rode freight trains as hobos looking for work.

A hobo traveled and worked; a tramp traveled and didn't; a bum did neither.

Over 1 million Mexican Americans were forced or pressured to leave the US; about 60% were US citizens.

Learn

FDR and the New Deal

Franklin D. Roosevelt won in 1932: “The only thing we have to fear is fear itself.”

His radio fireside chats calmed the country.

Many wealthy people and business leaders hated FDR; they said he was too powerful.
